Selection Committee,

It is my honor to provide this letter as a formal recommendation of Brad Wyatt. I have known Brad for the past eight months. Throughout this time, Brad has proven to be a phenomenal student leader, advocate, and mentor to his peers. Brad continues to impress me with his energy, integrity, and dedication to the Carnegie Mellon community.

During my time as the Coordinator of Greek Leadership Development at Carnegie Mellon, I have had the opportunity to work with Brad in his roles as Sigma Nu social chair and alumni relations chair and a Greek Peer Mentor. The Greek Peer Mentor program is a highly selective program that brings together the key leaders and role models in the Greek community at Carnegie Mellon University to facilitate a number of workshops for new members and help new members from all organizations seamlessly integrate into the community. The Greek Peer Mentors serve as the liaisons to the Student Life Office and a resource for members of our community. Brad has served as a Greek Peer Mentor for three semesters and has stood out amongst the group for taking the initiative to create open channels of communication and access for new members. He was a great collaborator and helped other Greek Peer Mentors through his facilitation skills. Because of his dedication, approachability, and character, Brad serves as a model leader in our community.

Through many of his roles within Sigma Nu Fraternity, Brad has challenged others to strive for excellence and has helped the organization to think critically about its purpose. Brad approaches each one of his positions with a positive outlook and truly assesses what the needs are. He is savvy in how he utilizes his resources and mobilizes others to commit to a shared vision. Not only is Brad concentrated on his individual leadership positions, but he is also focused on the greater whole. Brad is confident in having difficult conversations and holding his brothers and the members of his community accountable. The work that Brad has done within our Greek community thus far speaks highly to his ability to communicate, model, and expect for others to behave in accordance with their values.

Beyond his work within the Greek community, Brad has taken on major roles in the greater community including serving as an Orientation Counselor, a member of Student Senate, and creating his own student organization which is centered around politics and economics. What is most rewarding about watching Brad manage all of these roles is the passion that he brings to each one. Though he manages quite a lot of activities, he is selective in his involvement in order to not only get the most out of each experience, but also to bring his best self to the table. His energy brightens up any room that he is in, and his ability to manage each of his roles effectively is astonishing.

It is impossible to list all of the ways that Brad has impacted our campus community. It has been a privilege to work alongside such a vibrant and authentic leader. Brad has set the bar high for what Fraternity men and Carnegie Mellon scholars should strive to be. Brad is a man of principle, humility, and the epitome of a Carnegie Mellon scholar. I am confident that Brad would be an asset to your organization. Should you have any further questions, I would be more than happy to speak to Brad's qualifications.

Sincerely,

Emily Cunningham
